An experienced speaker, coach, writer and educator, John Capecci, Ph.D., launched Capecci Communications in 1996 and has provided custom training programs, consulting and writing services to a wide variety of individuals and organizations. He has published on the subjects of personal narrative and advocacy, is co-editor of a best-selling series of monologue anthologies and co-author of “Living Proof: Telling Your Stories to Make a Difference.” His clients include health professionals, arts educators, advocates, designers, senior executives, non-profits and marketing/pr agencies. Located in Minneapolis, Capecci Communications draws upon a nationwide network of communication professionals.

Previously, John taught public speaking, communication theory, interpretation of literature and advanced performance courses at Eastern Michigan University. He received his Ph.D. in speech communication from Southern Illinois University and an M.A. in communication studies from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. John currently serves on the advisory board for The Soap Factory, a visual arts organization in Minneapolis, volunteers with other local nonprofits and works to preserve his historic neighborhood along the banks of the Mississippi.